The GFWC-NC Greeson-Johnson Teaching Scholarship will be placed at Appalachian State by approval of the Board of Trustees Scholarship Committee.

A gift of $10,000 was committed to the school, it was decided by the Board of Trustees that the funding option of giving a gift to the school, as opposed to an endowment, which will receive $2,000 annually for a period of five years. The first recipient of this scholarship should receive funds before the 2021 fall semester.

The Scholarship Committee had recommendations for donor preferences: the scholarship be awarded based on need; a minimum 3.0 GPA be established; only junior and senior students from North Carolina are eligible; a student be enrolled in the Teacher Education program within the Reich College of Education; volunteer service could be considered; scholarship may be renewable, upon re-application; administration related to this scholarship is the responsibility of the Dean of the Reich College of Education; and the scholarship be named the GFWC-NC Greeson-Johnson Scholarship for Teacher Education.

GFWC-NC will be informed as to the recipient of our scholarship. The school recognizes its donors and scholars at its annual scholarship reception in the spring to which Andie Johnson and Sharon Greeson would be invited to meet the scholarship recipient.
